APPENDIX - - - - - - - - - - 47

REPORT of the PROCEEDINGS of the REGISTRAR of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES in England, in his Office of Registrar, and of the principal Matters transacted by FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, which have come under his cognizance during the past Year, and of the Particulars of every Award made by him under the Provisions of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 1 & 2. Report.

DURING the year 1863 the Registrar has examined and certified the Rules of 1,054 Friendly Societies, and also the alterations of the Rules of 1,231 Societies; making a total of 2,285 certificates.

Twenty-three Friendly Societies have deposited their Rules with the Registrar under the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 44.

Notices of dissolution have been received from 118 Friendly Societies; of which number 47 were advertised in the "London Gazette," pursuant to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 3.

During the year 1863 the sum of 1,150 l. in the Bank of England, has been transferred by the Registrar into the names of Trustees appointed by Friendly Societies, in the places of others removed, absent, &c., pursuant to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 36.

Since the Registrar's last Report, no Act of Parliament has passed relating to Friendly Societies; but an important Act with reference to the members of Friendly Societies, and others, intituled "An Act to grant Additional Facilities for the Purchase of small GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES, and for assuring Payments of Money ON DEATH," received the Royal Assent on the 14th July 1864, the provisions of which will be mentioned hereafter, and the Act will be found at length in the APPENDIX.

The following is a list, arranged according to Counties, of the Friendly Societies which, since the Registrar's last Report, have been dissolved, and the dissolution advertised in the "London Gazette," pursuant to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 3.

Those marked * were dissolved by the Registrar, and the particulars of his awards are added:

A paper on the present position of Friendly Societies in England and Wales was read before the Institute of Actuaries in March of this year, by Samuel Brown, Esq., F.S.S., Vice President of the Institute of Actuaries, and Actuary of the Guardian Life Office; and as it contains most valuable information and suggestions, the Registrar has made some extracts therefrom.

After

Report.

After the passing of the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, in 1855, the objects of all Friendly Societies to be certified thereunder, are described to be, to raise, by voluntary subscriptions, with or without the aid of donations, a fund for any of the following purposes:

1. To provide a sum on the birth of a member's child, or on the death of a member, or for the funeral expenses of his wife or child.

2. To provide for the relief or maintenance of members, their wives or children, brothers or sisters, nephews or nieces, in old age, sickness or widowhood, or to secure endowments for members or their nominees, that is, sums payable on their attaining a given age.

3. For any purpose sanctioned by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, or, if in Scotland, by the Lord Advocate, to which, in their opinion, the benefits and provisions of this Act ought to be extended. But in order to limit the benefits to those classes for whom this legislation is specially intended, no member is allowed to subscribe for an annuity exceeding 30*l.*, or for a sum at death or any other contingency exceeding 200*l.*

Under this latter clause the Secretary of State for the Home Department has already sanctioned societies—

1. For assisting the members when compelled to travel in search of employment.

2. For temporary relief in distressed circumstances.

3. For relief or maintenance in blindness, lameness, or accident.

4. For the purchase of coals or other necessaries.

5. Against loss by disease or death of cattle and horses employed in trade or agriculture.

6. To accumulate at interest, for the use of the members, the surplus fund which might happen to remain after providing for their assurance.

All these objects have a decided bearing on the welfare and self-improvement of the operative classes, and in no respect go beyond the general aim and principles of these societies. The special application, however, may depend upon circumstances which at different periods may make one scheme more useful or desirable than another.

It is particularly to be noticed that the legislation upon this subject subject is meant rather to be encouraging than imperative, and that it does not force existing societies to register themselves. It rather offers them privileges and benefits which induce them voluntarily to place themselves under the protection of the law; and, by submitting to a few wholesome restrictions, to gain certain powers, which, whilst they enable them to act more freely in some respects, do at the same time confine them by such regulations as materially benefit both existing and future members.

The Act itself is intended to regulate newly-formed Friendly Societies; and by section 11 the Registrar is empowered, on receiving copies of the rules of any Provident, Benevolent, or Charitable Institution, to certify that they are not repugnant to law; and then the privileges of certain sections of the Act are extended to them.

By section 44, certain provisions of the Act, with respect to the decision of disputes, and punishment in case of fraud, &c., are extended to any society, if not illegal, even though uncertified, provided the rules be deposited with the Registrar.

The first societies established under the Friendly Society Acts were merely benefit clubs; but of late years some have been formed into Orders, or Societies, to which only the initiated have admission, in imitation of the Freemasons. Among them may be mentioned:

The Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows.
The Ancient Order of Foresters.
The Ancient Order of Shepherds.
The Independent Order of Rechabites.
The Independent Order of Odd Fellows.
The National Order of Odd Fellows.
The Ancient Order of Romans.
The Order of Ancient Druids.
The Masonic Order of Crimson Oaks.
The Sons of Temperance.
The Order of Old Friends, &c. &c. &c.

Some of these Orders constitute separate societies of very great importance, and comprise a very large number of members. Each single society comprising the Order, manages its own affairs, and pays its own sick members, as well as burials; but is repaid by a levy made over the whole districts. They have also this great advantage over most of the smaller societies, that when a member changes his residence, he can, with the consent of the members of another branch, transfer his subscriptions, and secure the same benefits without delay, or loss, in the transfer; and the greater part of these societies, described as Lodges and Courts, make provision for the widows and orphans, and for their needy or unfortunate members, but not a provision for superannuation or old age.

Previous to the Act of 1855, legal difficulties prevented the registration of the rules of the Orders; but since then a large number have come in, and many more are yearly added to the list.

In almost all trades there are Trade Societies, the professed object of which is to keep up the rate of wages, to which is frequently added a Burial Fund. They are not enrolled or registered, as the object is clearly illegal, and contrary to sound policy, and cannot, therefore, receive the sanction of the Registrar's certificate. Some curious instances are afforded by them of the attempts of some of the members to interfere with the rights of labour of others; that is, their right of accepting such wages as they please, without reference to the trade in general.

> In 1860, The United Broad Silk Weavers' Society set a price upon all works in the trade, dealt in a summary manner with offenders, and used threats to enforce the enlistment of new members for these purposes.
> The Metropolitan Society of Operative Millstone Builders decided that any builder, being a member, not agreeing to the terms prescribed by the Society, should not be allowed to work; nor would they recognise the right to have more than two apprentices to 12 skilled workmen in any workshop.
> The brickmakers of Manchester, Salford, and their vicinities, were to agree that they would not make bricks of other dimensions than those specified in certain resolutions.

In these cases the Society gives what is called "turn-out pay" to those who are dismissed from or prevented from obtaining employment by their adhesion to these rules of the Society.

In the late strike in the building trades, many members of Friendly Societies were called upon to pay a small sum extra, weekly or monthly, to support men on strike; and the effect of refusal is such, that, as it appears by the facts given, very few escaped being compelled to subscribe, however reluctantly they consented to be so taxed.

In the Accident and Burial Society of Labourers, of which the rules had been duly certified, an "Incidental Fund" was afterwards afterwards formed, by the members being called upon to pay 1 d. a week each; and part of the funds were applied in aid of a strike.

These attempts to combine the relief of the members in sickness or old age with this interference with the natural adjustment of the rate of wages between masters and workmen, are evidently abuses of the admirable system of self-help, and contrary to the spirit and object of Friendly Societies.

Sickness and Mortality.—One of the most important questions in determining the actual position of a Friendly Society at any time is evidently the table, which, in the judgment of the actuary, ought to be used as most nearly representing its present and probable future rates of sickness and mortality. In the various collections of such facts which have been made at different times, great discrepancies will be found, arising partly from the different mode of obtaining them, partly from the peculiar regulations of the societies whose experience has been brought together. Mr. Ansell arranged the collection of returns made for the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, in 1828–29; but the returns, although furnished from every part of the country, comprise only 24,323 years of life, between the ages 20 and 70; and the results both of sickness and mortality are very irregular at each age, and even when corrected by combining together periods of five years of age, and taking the average for the mean age. This is stated to be the first original collection of data on this subject in England. Mr. Finlaison's Report on Life Annuities, in 1829, contains the experience of a London Friendly Society for six years, but which gave no information after the age of 60.

In 1840 Mr. Neison obtained a large number of facts relating to sickness and mortality amongst about 200,000 members, for a period of five years on the life of each, but they were in some respects defective, being merely voluntary returns made at the request of an individual, and not required by authority nor registered under the care and responsibility of official inspection.

They were, however, to a great extent, confirmed by the subsequent publication of the experience of the Manchester Unity of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, by Mr. Radcliffe, the secretary, comprising about 600,000 years of life in the three years ending with 1848. The comparison of these with Mr. Neison's tables affords many novel and interesting results, especially as regards the effect of occupation on health.

Mr.

Mr. Brown states that he had not time or space to analyze and compare the preceding data, but confined himself to the last and most authentic collection of the experience of Friendly Societies obtained from the quinquennial returns to the 31st December 1850, received by the Registrar of Friendly Societies in England. The reports and tables deduced therefrom by Mr. A. G. Finlaison, were presented, in accordance with an Order of the House of Commons, and ordered to be printed 16th August 1853. In July 1852, the Council of the Institute of Actuaries was consulted by the Registrar of Friendly Societies as to the necessity of further information; and, if they deemed it needful, whether the 40 columns containing these returns could be beneficially used for the purpose; also, if they would consent to superintend the preparation of such data, and the computation of the tables; and, generally, they were requested to advise as to the manner in which the subject should be treated. The Council, in reply, expressed their opinion that such a valuable opportunity should not be lost for adding to our knowledge; and offered to undertake the public trust of analysing the returns, and forming from them tables of the money values of allowances in sickness and sums at death.

The Lords of the Treasury, on considering the Report of the Registrar, thought they would be justified in incurring the expense for so great a public object; but, on the whole, considered it would be better that the task should be undertaken by the Government officials in the Department for Friendly Societies, and under the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt.

Of the original facts, the general results are as follows :—

The total number included in the selected returns as liable to sickness, from the age 10 to 86, was 792,980; of these, 198,152 were returned as sick—very nearly 25 per cent. The average amount of sickness per annum to each person was 10·12 days, and the average sickness per annum to each person sick was 40·5 days. The recorded deaths were 9,977 (on 793,759), or 1·26 per cent.; whilst the exclusions or withdrawals were as high as 23,799, or 3 per cent. The rate of mortality is singularly low, which is to be accounted for in a great measure by the latter fact.

The few returns from Burial Clubs showed a much higher death rate. Those from Lancashire, which included children from one month old, gave, on an average number of 12,840 persons in each year, deaths 3·18 per cent.; and those from Kent, Kent, on an average of 5,987 in each year, deaths 1·85 per cent., including one Society in which children under age 14 were admitted. Report.

The classes of "females," "colliers," "miners," and "mariners," were separated from the above abstracts, and the results shown by themselves.

Cases of superannuation were carefully examined, to ascertain whether it was a case of chronic sickness, or in the sense of a retirement on a pension for old age. Where it was a case under 60, set down as superannuated, but with a possibility of restoration to health as a contributing member, it was classed under the head of sickness; and it is considered "that the sickness tabulated is the whole sickness that could be ascertained to be really such." This is one of the most difficult parts of the subject, and on which the Sick Clubs are exposed to the greatest danger above the age of 60. The tendency to obtain the large allowance for sickness, and to keep it permanently on slight pretences, requires the greatest vigilance to counteract, and I fear can only be successfully met by converting the sick pay, after 60 or 65, into a fixed pension of a fourth or fifth part of the sick allowance previous to that age, which is about the proportion which most of the tables of rates for sickness throughout life will be found to admit of.

There are, however, numerous Benefit Clubs in which the sick pay is continued throughout life, and which require in the valuations tables constructed on this principle. Mr. Higham, in a very useful paper in vol. vii. of the "Assurance Magazine," has examined into this subject, and given us a table showing the value of 1 l. a week in sickness for the whole of life, being an extension of Finlaison's Heavy Labour Table. But I have found that most of the tables of rates for whole life sickness actually in use and certified by Mr. Griffith Davies, accord more nearly with Finlaison's General Table for sickness till age 65, and then a pension of about one-fifth the sick pay for the rest of life.

Mr. Finlaison has presented the facts relating to sickness in several different forms. In order to ascertain the effect of climate, he divided the whole returns into provinces or groups of districts. There is not so great a difference as might be expected, the metropolitan showing the smallest, 9·45 days; the manufacturing, 10·06 days; and the south-western the highest, 11·01 days of sickness per annum to each person living. The number of days in the other provinces lie between these rates. It seems well established, as a general rule, that wherever the susceptibility to attack is greatest, the duration of the sickness is least. This is briefly shown in the following little summary given in the excellent paper in the "Assurance Magazine, vol. v., p. 6, by Mr. Henry Tompkins, who is deservedly mentioned by Mr. Finlaison for his ability and services in the preparation of these returns.

Province.	Number per Cent. taken Sick.	Days of Sickness to each Sick Person	Days of Sickness to each Person Liable.
Northern - -	19·89	max. 50·38	10·02
Welsh - - -	22·14	„ 45·73	10·13
Manufacturing -	22·34	„ 45·02	10·06
Midland - -	max. 29·29	min. 36·37	10·65

The returns classified according to locality thus showed that very little influence was thereby exercised upon the rate of sickness; and a similar, though unexpected, result arises when they are examined in regard to density of population:—

—	Number per Cent. taken Sick.	Days of Sickness to each Sick Person.	Days of Sickness to each Person Liable.
City - - -	25·20	38·39	9·67
Town - - -	24·63	42·25	10·40
Rural - - -	25·14	39·96	10·05
England and Wales	24·99	40·48	10·12

Taking the city and the town districts together, and comparing them with the rural, there is evidently no great difference between either, nor in all three from the average of England and Wales.

The next inquiry, and one which is of the greatest interest, is what effect is produced upon the health of the operative classes by the nature of their occupation. In examining this question a novel and, to a certain extent, effective plan was adopted. Discarding the mere name of the occupation, which would have required some hundreds of subdivisions, all those classes which pursued different kinds of labour under somewhat similar circumstances, as to protection from climate and exercise of physical strength, were brought together, and all occupations eventually reduced to four divisions—

Light

Light and heavy labour without exposure to the weather,

Light and heavy labour with exposure to the weather;

whilst distinct classes were composed of miners, mariners, and females whose occupation could not be clearly ascertained.

It must be remarked that, in this subdivision, much must depend on the individual judgment with which the occupations have been grouped together; and that no light is thrown on the influence of a particular occupation on the health of the workmen engaged in it, whereby the special evils to which they may be subjected may be remedied, either in a sanitary or a medical point of view. But, for the broad purpose of roughly estimating the liabilities of Friendly Societies, Mr. Finlaison appears to have made out his case by showing, in the following summary, that the widest margin in the three modes of subdivision is between light and heavy labour. At the age of 32, about which the members of Friendly Societies are found in greatest numbers, the days of sickness to 100 persons are :—

	Heavy or Light Labour. Days.	Geographical Locality. Days.	City, Town, or Rural District. Days.
Maximum - - -	755	1,100	1,040
Minimum - - -	577	945	967
Difference - -	178	155	73

In contrast of labour the increase of sickness is 31 per cent., in contrast of climate only 16 per cent., and in density of population it is but 7½ per cent.

Several attempts have been made to deduce from these and other returns of Friendly Societies some general law of sickness. Mr. Scratchley, Mr. Brown states, has given what he so calls, but it appears to him to be rather an ingenious way of correcting and adjusting a table by a uniform process in which the resulting table very nearly accords with the facts observed. This is not necessarily a law of sickness, which one is apt to consider must in some way or other be discovered in the relation of the rate of mortality to the living. Repeated attacks, or intensity of suffering from sickness in any population, would seem to indicate, by its effects on the human frame, a corresponding increase in the rate of mortality; and, if a general law of sickness could be discovered, it is thought we should not be far off from discovering a general law of mortality. The nearest approach to this law appears at present to be some constant rate of mortality about the age when youth merges into the period of manhood, increasing by a geometrical ratio till the period of old age, and then by a higher geometrical ratio to the end of life.

Report.

Mr. Scratchley draws attention to the necessity of distinguishing between medical sickness and that against which Friendly Societies insure, namely, temporary inability to labour. He quotes a high medical authority "that no attack of acute recoverable sickness ever lasts longer than from six weeks to three months, and chronic recoverable sickness no longer than twelve months. Chronic irrecoverable sickness may, therefore, be held to be that which exceeds one year, or which a medical man, from the nature of the case, would certify to come under that denomination."

On this principle, analyzing the experience of a great variety of companies, he considers that he has discovered the true law of sickness to be as follows:—

(1.) That at the age of 15, when infantile diseases are past, there is a certain constant minimum rate of sickness to which human beings, on the average, are subject at every period of life, depending upon race, climate, &c.; and that in the United Kingdom this constant seems to be between the limits of five and seven days' sickness per annum.

(2.) That at each age every individual is exposed to

An excess of sickness over such constant sickness,	increasing with his years, and equal to	the sum of the excesses in the 5th and 10th years preceding.

Or, in other words, it may be expressed as

The difference between the rate of sickness at any age, and that five years below	equals	the difference between the rates of sickness for 5 and 15 years younger than the given age.

The resulting rates certainly accord very nearly with Mr Finlaison's Tables of the average rate of Friendly Societies in England and Wales, adjusted by taking the average of each five years of age for the middle year of the five years:—

On the other hand, Mr. Edmonds, in a very interesting paper, which will be found inserted in the "Assurance Magazine, vol. v., p. 127, contends that the present observations establish the fact of the identity between the constants of mortality and the constants of sickness; although the limiting age for the commencement of the period of old age for sickness or mortality differs widely in Finlaison's, Neison's, and Ratcliffe's observations, arising, no doubt, from the different treatment of the question of superannuation. Correcting these, he considers that the remarkable fact, that the mortality in Friendly Societies, at ages above 53, is given as 20 per cent. less than that for the total male population of England at these ages, may be explained by the omissions for the deaths corresponding to the true sickness included in the superannuation cases. On the whole, the conclusion appears to be, that there is a specific relation between the sickness and mortality at any age, and the proportion is commonly found to be two years of sickness to one of death.

Mr. Edmonds has shown (in the "Lancet"), as far back as 1836, from observations then recently made, that the fatality of cases or attacks of sickness increased with the age, according to the law which regulates the increase of mortality and the increase of duration of sickness for each year of life. He then stated it to be "the inevitable consequence of the identity of the numbers regulating the proportion of the attacks of sickness to deaths, of duration of sickness to life, and of deaths to life at each age, that the number of annual attacks of sickness for a given number living was the same at all ages, and that the duration of each attack of sickness increased with the age in the same degree as the mortality increased.

The following comparison shows the near approximation by theory to three sets of observations :—

Dr. Farr also, in the Registrar General's 12th Report, concurs in that view of the constant relation of sickness to mortality, and deduces tables of money values on this theory, by assuming that the number of persons constantly sick is equal to twice the annual mortality by the English Life, No. 2, agreeing very nearly with, but rather less than, Mr. Finlaison's rates.

Mr. Benjamin Gompertz, F.R.S., also has, in a recent paper, shown the relation between sickness increasing with age and his celebrated theory of mortality, which has led to so much discussion lately in the Institute of Actuaries.

Allowing for the effect of selection of life at the younger ages, and the great number who withdrew soon after entering the sick clubs, this conclusion very well agrees, on the average, at different ages shown in the Government returns.

Report.

From the above facts, which are given by Mr. Tompkins, it would appear that the withdrawals at early ages are as high as nearly 6 per cent., and gradually diminish, till within the period 55 to 60 they become about 1 per cent.; thus particularly affecting the rate of mortality at the younger ages. The weeks of sickness to one death at each age begin from 132 at age 20 to about 100 at age 60, or, on an average, 2·25 years of sickness to each death.

The leading features of these, the most recent tables of observation as to the experience of sickness and mortality in Friendly Societies have been given, because by them and the tables of money values deduced from them we have the means of ascertaining with sufficient accuracy the position of any Benefit Club or Friendly Society submitted to the test of valuation. It must be admitted, that amongst the 20,000 societies some are certainly insolvent; but, as a general rule, this result may be attributed to the ignorance of the managers of the real risks to which they stand liable until the inadequacy of the funds is forced upon their notice by the gradually increasing claims. It does not at all follow that the clubs are reduced to this condition by fradulent intention. On the contrary, it may be gathered from the Registrar's Reports since 1855, that there is a very earnest desire amongst the managers or members to ascertain their real condition, and to avail themselves of such legal privileges as are offered to them to better their condition. A glance at the steadily increasing number of the rules and alterations of rules, examined and certified by the Registrar, is sufficient to strengthen this conviction. Even the increasing number of notices of dissolution is not to be looked upon as an unhealthy state of affairs. On the contrary, the dissolution of a society is frequently effected with a view of remodelling and starting afresh under better regulations, and with rates of premium such as increased knowledge has shown to be necessary for the risks which they have to incur.

It is to be regretted that so many continually break up, and that so many more may have to do so before the whole status of these Societies can be considered sound and wholesome. But, for many years past, the enlightened legislation on this subject, and the general good sense of the managers themselves, have been effecting a silent though perceptible improvement throughout the country.

The principal causes of failures, in the greater number of cases, are—

Report.

1. The small number of Members—whereby the liabilities under sickness and death pay fall with great irregularity. In prosperous years, the members find a larger surplus than they expected, and divide it, forgetting that one or two extra cases in the following year, which only make up the average, may sweep away all the previous reserves.

2. Inadequate Premiums.—Even the experience of competent persons, who have studied this subject, may be at fault, from the great difficulty of adapting our knowledge to the local or peculiar circumstances, and the probable occupation or habits of the members. But great numbers of Societies have been formed without any professional advice at all. The founders have probably selected the rates of some neighbouring Society; and either altered or reduced them to suit, as they think, their own case, of which it is not unnatural to suppose they generally take too favourable a view. For a few years, with young and newly-selected lives, and, as we have seen, great numbers of withdrawals, all goes on too favourably. As the Society advances in age, and the body of members grows older, the claims both under sickness and mortality increase, and then the managers come for advice, and find, when it is too late, that the premiums have been insufficient from the commencement. The younger members, unwilling now to pay up for the advantage of the old, the older resisting the reduction of their benefits, which they consider have been promised to them, nothing remains but to dissolve the Society, and share the remaining funds as fairly as possible.

3. The Ignorance of the Members of the extent to which the surplus of Premiums ought to be accumulated in early years, to meet the requirements of Advanced Age.—Notwithstanding the number of withdrawals, some members are left every year with advanced age, approaching the time when the losses increase rapidly. Mr. Finlaison's Tables show that the average amount of sickness, on the whole, does not exhibit a very marked increase from the age of 18 to 35. It is even at a minimum at age 32. But the duration of sickness regularly increases with the age, and the mortality bears a constant ratio to the duration of sickness, so that at the older ages the claims fall on the Society with a rapidity and certainty which members did not expect, and for which they have consequently not prepared.

4. The difficulty of distinguishing at Ages above 60 between Superannuation and True Sickness.—The effect of this is, that the

the old members, instead of receiving only the reduced rate which their premiums would afford from and after a given age, continue to draw the high sickness rates in a larger proportion than any tables of observation would admit. This is the frequent cause of failure of the old Benefit Societies in which the sick pay is continued throughout life. In forming a new Society, or in reconstituting an old one on improved principles, it should always be a main object to persuade the members to adopt the limit of 60 or 65 for sick pay, and then to commence a deferred life annuity for so much as the difference in their rates of contribution will permit.

5. The very objectionable Practice of holding the Monthly or other Periodical Meetings in Public-houses and under the influence of the Publican.—The Registrar has accumulated such a mass of evidence of the evil effects of this practice, that it is to be hoped the attention of the Clubs themselves is now drawn to it. One of the principal results is naturally the expenditure of the funds of absent members for the indulgence of those present. The restriction of each member to pay individually for what he consumed would soon check the practice. But that would not answer the object of the publican. In one instance, to avoid the legal objections, 5 per cent. of the gross income was paid to a landlord for rent, who returned part in liquor. In another case, 2*d.* monthly from each member was charged for general expenses, but these were paid out of the general fund, and the 2*d.* taken for beer for the members present. A collector writes that, in another Club, in which 10*l.* a week came in, there was a rule that the expenses should not exceed 25 per cent. of the funds; but they were actually 25 per cent. In the anniversary feasts, the costs of processions, bands, dresses, ribbon, aprons, and personal decorations have been frequently charged to the general expenses; and in some cases, where separate funds have been raised for the general expenses, it has been contended that these charges were within the scope of such separate funds. The Registrar, however, has recently obtained a decided opinion from the Attorney General, that no part of the funds raised under 9 and 25 sects. of the Act can be legally applied to any such items, and that the term "incidental expenses" must be reasonably understood, and cannot be stretched to matters unconnected with the main purposes of the Society. This opinion has been widely circulated, and will, no doubt, check these extravagant expenditures, which have have undoubtedly led, in numerous cases, to the insolvency and ruin of the Clubs.

6. Injudicious and Speculative Investments.—It is evident that, if Societies are to have reserves for future claims, the investments should only be, like those of the larger Assurance Companies, in public stocks, or loans on real property, debentures, and other first-class securities, and not in trade and other speculations. But from the Clubs being held in public-houses, and these generally the property of brewers, the funds accumulated are frequently placed in their hands, and have on various occasions been entirely lost in the fluctuations of trade. Loans to private bankers, manufacturers, Building and Loan Societies, and similar investments on notes of deposit, or notes of hand, must (however respectable the parties or managers may be) occasionally fail as commercial risks, and involve all the members of a Benefit Club in the ruin of their hopes, leaving some in misery at an age when it is too late to commence saving again, and disheartening others from beginning at all.

7. The combination of the different Risks in a Common Fund.—There can be little doubt that, if the three funds for sickness, death, and superannuation were kept perfectly distinct, and the accounts carefully recorded, year by year, the members, who may be ignorant even of the first principles of the subject, might take alarm, when they saw a continual diminution of the funds under that head for several successive years, and, perhaps, call for scientific inquiry. But by charging the other funds with the deficiency, the state of the Society may be concealed till it is too late to remedy the mischief, and the Society must dissolve.

Other causes of failure might be stated, but these are the principal ones.

If the effect of Government competition, under the late Act passed for granting annuities or payments at death, is to make all doubtful Societies look into their affairs, to amend all that may be going wrong, and to see that to all their other advantages they can add a security which, by good management, scientific skill, and strict honour, may, as in the case of many of our existing Institutions, be little short of what Government can offer, then no harm, but a vast amount of good will result from the Government proposition.

But it would be sad, indeed, if instead of improving and setting on a firm foundation the present Friendly Societies, it simply destroyed them in detail. The great antiquity of these funds funds for self-help is a proof that they meet the spirit of this people in every age. The changes that have of late years followed a more enlightened legislation, evidence their desire to keep pace with the growing intelligence of the country. The meetings of the members, when conducted in some room of their own, and away from the influence of the public-house, encourage that spirit of self-reliance and of participation in public business, and in the management of his own affairs, which the working man has a right to in common with the highest classes in the land. And, finally, the good-feelings which in the country bring forth the clergy and gentry, and the manufacturers and employers of labour in towns, to aid with their judgment and advice, but without injudicious interference, the efforts of the working man to better his condition, and, by self-denial in the present, to look forward in the future not merely to a provision for himself, but for his wife and children after him, form a bond of union which has happily united all classes in this Kingdom, and made these Friendly Societies a medium of kindly sentiments, of generous sympathy, and of mutual respect, which would render the total destruction of them, whether by accident or design, a public calamity to this country.

Questions having arisen as to the effect of the alteration of rules as affecting members of Friendly Societies, the Registrar has obtained the opinion of the Attorney General on the following:—

CASE.

A Society was established in the year 1830, under the Friendly Society Acts, for the purpose of insuring to each member, paying a certain monthly contribution, a fixed weekly sum in sickness, a fixed weekly allowance after 60, and a certain sum at death.

By the Acts in force at the time of the establishment of the Society, alterations in the rules might be made, and, when certified, were to be binding on the several members and officers of the Society. (See 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, s. 9.)

By the present "Friendly Society Act," 18 & 19 Vict., c. 63, s. 27, the rules may be altered by a resolution of a meeting specially called for that purpose.

Under the 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, s. 9, the votes of three-fourths of the members present at a general meeting were required to carry any alteration; but under the 18 & 19 Vict., c. 63, s. 27, a simple majority of the votes of the members present is sufficient.

In consequence of the funds of the Society being much reduced, it is intended to frame new rules, which it is proposed to have certified, either increasing the contributions payable by the members, or reducing the benefits in sickness, old age, and at death; and these new rules are to apply to all the present, as well as the future members.

It

Report.

It is contended on the one hand, that as the present members joined with a knowledge that the rules might be altered, they have no reason to complain of the new rules; whilst, on the other hand, it is contended that these new rules cannot affect the present members, as that would be a breach of the contract made with the members when they entered the Society; and that although the rules may be altered, there is no provision in the Act as to altering the tables; but on this point it is presumed that as the tables are referred to in the rules, they are incorporated with them, and might be repealed.

The Attorney General is requested to advise whether the altered rules will be binding upon the members admitted into the Society before such new rules were certified.

I am of opinion that the altered rules will be binding upon the members admitted into the society before the new rules were certified, except as to any relief, annuity, or other benefit from the funds of the Society, of which any member (or the wife, nominee, or child of any member) may be then in the actual receipt, or entitled to the actual receipt, under the existing rules. With regard to all future prospective and contingent benefits, the rights to which may not, at the time of making the new rules, have become vested and absolute by reason of any event then already past, the new rules will, I think, be binding upon all the members.

In order to make the new rules valid, they must be made in a manner conformable to the provisions of 10 Geo. 4, cap. 50, s. 9 and by the majority of three-fourths there required.

11 June 1864. Roundell Palmer.

By the Act 16 & 17 Vict. c. 45, s. 2, the Commissioners for the reduction of the National Debt were authorised to grant to, or for the benefit of any depositor in a Savings Bank, or other person whom the Commissioners thought entitled to be or to become a depositor in a Savings Bank, any immediate or deferred life annuities depending on single lives, or immediate annuities depending on joint lives with benefit of survivorship, or on the joint continuance of two lives to any amount not less than four pounds nor more than thirty pounds in the whole, to or for the benefit of any one person, and to receive payments for such immediate life annuities for one sum; and for such deferred life annuities, either in one sum or in annual sums payable for fixed periods: Provided that no such annuities should be granted to or for the benefit of any person under the age of 10 years. Such annuity might be granted to or possessed by husband and wife, and deferred life annuities ties might be granted with a condition that the purchase money should or should not be returnable, and contracts might be made for the payment of a sum of money on his or her death, provided that the party contracting for such payment on death should at the same time purchase a deferred annuity depending upon his or her own life, as the case might be; and that the money payable on death did not exceed the amount of the sum paid down for the said payment and annuity taken together, and should in no case exceed 100 l. in the whole.

This Act was passed to enable the industrious classes to purchase immediate or deferred life annuities, and to insure a certain sum at death. Under it a considerable number of immediate annuities have been purchased as well as deferred annuities, but on account of the condition annexed to the contract for the payments at death not a single one has been entered into. The members of Friendly Societies are in the habit of insuring for medical attendance, relief in sickness, old age pay or deferred annuities, and money payable at death; the two former, viz., medical attendance and sick pay, may be secured by the members, if they take the necessary precaution of paying according to their age and joining a Society with a sufficient number of contributors; but with respect to annuities and payments at death, which are benefits deferred, it unfortunately happens that in Friendly Societies the contributions for each benefits are in general not calculated according to the age of the members, and kept distinct from other benefits, but a certain monthly contribution is paid for all the benefits insured for, so that if the payments for sickness are insufficient, or there is fraud or imposition in cases of sickness, the money which should have accumulated for securing the deferred benefits, is applied to payments in sickness, in addition to which in many instances the expenses of anniversaries, and feasts, &c., are taken out of the funds, so that when the time arrives at which the annuities or superannuation pay becomes due, the funds of the Society are not sufficient to meet their claims, and the Society is obliged either to reduce the benefits or to dissolve. To enable the industrious classes to obtain these deferred benefits without any risk, the Act of the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 43 has been passed, under this the immediate or deferred annuities mentioned in 16 & 17 Vict. c. 45, may be purchased to an extent not exceeding 50 l. per annum, and an insurance on life may be effected of not less than 20 l., or exceeding 100 l.; by any party not under the age of 16 or over 60 years. The grant of annuities annuities or contracts for payments of money at death under this Act, cannot be made until by s. 6, the tables and regulations have been laid 30 days before both Houses of Parliament. In this Act, however, the provision introduced relative to the amount payable at death will, in the opinion of the Registrar, restrict the benefits proposed to be conferred on the industrious classes. In Friendly Societies, a member is allowed to insure for as small a sum as he thinks fit up to 200 l. The insurances by the industrious classes or agricultural labourers, do not average more than 10 l. The parties, therefore, in this respect, will not be benefited by the late Act in the manner contemplated, although they will have the Government security, which is so desirable to afford them the means of securely investing the results of their industry. Again, in the case of benefits derivable from a Friendly Society, Savings Bank, or an annuity granted under the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 45, being for the members', depositors', or purchasers' own benefits, no assignment can be made of such benefits, deposit, or interest; but by the late Act 27 & 28 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, a payment at death, which is clearly not intended for the benefit of the purchaser himself, but in the case of the working man, for the benefit of his widow, children, or relations, is assignable; this privilege for the first time legally granted to persons contracting for payments at death, of sums from 20 l. to 100 l., is not enjoyed by parties insuring their lives in ordinary life offices, and it is in the opinion of the Registrar extremely doubtful whether it will not be the means of depriving the families of many of the industrious classes of those benefits arising from contracts made for payments at death, and that the policies will be sold and transferred if the holder is at any time pressed for money; and the power given by s. 8 to the party to surrender to the Commissioners on the terms therein mentioned, his policy after five years' payments, appears to the Registrar to be quite sufficient. These two very material alterations were made in the Select Committee to which the Bill was referred when in the House of Commons. There is, likewise, a proviso at the end of the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 43, s. 9, also inserted in the Committee, that nothing in this or the said Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 45) contained, shall be held to exempt any person or persons entering into a contract for a payment at death, or any person becoming beneficially interested therein from probate or any stamp duty payable by law; this would have placed parties beneficially interested in contracts for payments at death in a worse situation, that either depositors in a Savings Bank or members of a Friendly Society,

Report.

Report.

Society, as the money payable on the death of a depositor, if it does not exceed 50 l., is payable to the widow, children, or next of kin, without probate or administration; and in the case of a member of a Friendly Society, a sum not exceeding 50 l. may be paid in like manner to nominee of a member being the husband, wife, father, mother, child, brother or sister, nephew or niece of such member. But by the Act of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 56 (passed on 25 July 1864), no probate or administration duty is payable on sums not exceeding 100 l.; and by the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 43, s. 9, every person purchasing an annuity, or having purchased the same, under the provisions of the said Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 45), or contracting for the payment of a sum of money on his or her death, shall be considered as a depositor in a Savings Bank, and all the provisions of the Acts now in force relating to Savings Banks, in as far as the same can or may be applicable, shall apply to the parties having purchased or purchasing such annuities, or contracting for the payments of money on death, and to the rules and regulations to be made for carrying the same into effect. A party, therefore, beneficially interested in a contract for payment on death under this Act (which cannot exceed 100 l.) will have no occasion to take out administration or probate of a will if the sum payable does not exceed 50 l.; and if it exceed that sum there will not be any probate or stamp duty payable.

Savings Banks.

Savings Banks, Loan Societies, and Co-operative Societies are so much connected with the industrious classes, that the Registrar thought it might be interesting to give the accounts relating to those institutions, which have been published since his last Report.

Post Office Savings Banks.

The Post Office Banks continue to progress most satisfactorily. Commencing on the 16th September 1861 with 301 banks, their number has gradually increased until it has now reached 3,064. These banks are spread over all parts of the United Kingdom, and they are open daily for from six to eight hours, for the transaction of business.

From their commencement in September 1861, these banks have opened accounts with more than 500,000 depositors, and they have closed about 112,000 accounts.

They have received 2,130,000 deposits, amounting (with interest) to 6,940,000*l.*, and they have repaid 2,452,000*l.* in 460,000 sums.

Out of nearly 7,000,000*l.* sterling paid into these savings banks, only 1,100,000*l.* has been transferred from the older savings banks, so that it is obvious that the Post Office Banks have created an almost entirely new business, and by the facilities which they have provided for the public in every town and village in the United Kingdom, they have induced large numbers of people to become depositors who had no opportunity of doing so before the establishment of the Postal Banks.

The following statement will explain, generally, the course of business in Post Office Savings Banks:—

More than 3,000 Post Office Savings Banks are open daily for the receipt and payment of money, during the hours appointed for money order business. Interest at the rate of 2*l.* 10*s.* per cent. is given on the money deposited in them. Depositors in them have direct Government security for the prompt repayment of their money. Every deposit received by any officer of the Postmaster-General, appointed for that purpose, is entered by him at the time in a numbered book, and the entry is attested by him, and by the dated stamp of his office; and the said book, with the entry so attested, is given to the depositor and retained by him as primary evidence of the receipt of the deposit. The amount of each deposit, and the name, occupation, and residence of the depositor are, upon the day of receipt, reported to the Postmaster-General, and the acknowledgment of the Postmaster-General is forthwith transmitted by post to the depositor as the conclusive evidence of his claim to the repayment of the deposit with interest thereon. If the depositor does not receive the said acknowledgment within 10 days from the day on which he made the deposit, he must apply for the same to the Postmaster-General by letter, and if necessary he must renew his application to the Postmaster-General until he receives the said acknowledgment. As a general rule, a deposit made at a Post Office Savings Bank in England land or Wales on any day, will be acknowledged from the chief office on the following day. The acknowledgments of deposits made in Ireland and Scotland will, as a general rule, be from one to two days later in their despatch from the chief office.

Any depositor wishing to withdraw the whole or part of the sum deposited by him, makes application for the same to the Postmaster-General on a form, a printed copy of which may be obtained at any Post Office Savings Bank, and on which he specifies the number of his book, the name of the office at which his first deposit was made, the sum he wishes to withdraw, his occupation and residence, and the Post Office at which he wishes to receive his money. On receipt of this application, a warrant for the amount required, payable at the office named, is sent to him by post. By the same post, the postmaster at whose office the warrant is made payable is advised of the issue of the warrant. This warrant is presented by the depositor at the Post Office named thereon, together with the depositor's book, in which the postmaster enters the amount repaid, and attests the entry with his signature, and the dated stamp of his office. As a general rule, those depositors who make their withdrawal applications on the proper form, receive the warrants for the sums required by them by return of post.

Every depositor is required, once in each year, on the anniversary of the day on which he made his first deposit, to forward his book to the principal office of the Postmaster-General, in order that the entries in the said book may be compared with the entries in the books of the Postmaster-General, and that the interest due to the depositor may be inserted in his book.

No charge for postage is made upon the depositors for the transmission of their books to the Postmaster-General, or for the return thereof to them, or for any applications they may have to make for acknowledgments of deposits, or for any application or necessary letter of inquiry respecting the sums deposited by them, or for the replies thereto.

Married women may deposit money in the Post Office Savings Bank, and money so deposited is repaid to the depositor, unless her husband gives notice, in writing, of marriage, and claims payment of the deposits. Money may be deposited by, or on behalf of, minors. Depositors over seven years of age are treated as persons of full age, but minors under seven years of age cannot withdraw their deposits until after they have reached the age of seven.

Friendly and co-operative societies, duly certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies, may deposit their funds, without limitation of amount, in the Post Office Savings Bank, but a copy of their rules must first be sent to the Postmaster-General. Charitable societies and Penny Banks may also deposit their funds, but a copy of their rules must previously be sent to the Postmaster-General. Especial aid is given to Penny Banks established in connexion with the Post Office Banks.

If a depositor in any legally established savings bank wishes to place his money in a Post Office Savings Bank, he applies to the trustees of the old savings bank for a certificate of transfer (in the form prescribed by the 10th section of the Act 24 Victoria, c. 14), and and pays the certificate into any Post Office Bank as if it were a cheque. By adopting this course, the depositor avoids trouble and the risk of carrying cash from one bank to the other.

Before the Post Office Savings Banks were established, 638 savings banks (in which number Penny Banks are, of course, not included) were open in the United Kingdom for the receipt of small savings. Of these, 355 were open but once in each week, 54 were open but once in each fortnight, several were open but once a month, and only 20 were open daily. Since the establishment of the 3,064 Post Office Banks, all of which are open daily, the duration and the frequency of the term for business have been increased at many of the old savings banks. On the other hand, the trustees of many of the old savings banks have either closed or signified their intention to close the institutions under their control, in the belief that the Post Office Banks afford the public a sufficient amount of accommodation.

The following statement gives the proportion of savings bank depositors to the whole population of the kingdom at each of four decennial periods, and shows that the rate of increase in the number of such depositors has, throughout the last 30 years, been greater than the rate of increase of population:—

On the 20th Nov.	1832, there were for every	100	persons	About $1\frac{5}{6}$	Savings Bank depositors.
„	1842	„	„	$3\frac{1}{4}$	„	„
„	1852	„	„	$4\frac{2}{5}$	„	„
„	1862*	„	„	$5\frac{4}{5}$	„	„

The following is a copy of the annual account of the Post Office Banks (for the year ended 31 December 1863), presented to Parliament pursuant to the Act 24 Vict. c. 14, and also a copy of further Parliamentary Returns showing statements of the assets and liabilities of these banks on the 31st March 1864.

The last-mentioned document is a remarkable one, exhibiting the enormous amount of business transacted in so short a space of time by those banks; but it is especially remarkable for exhibiting the fact that this gigantic organization has been established and carried on at a profit after paying and providing for all its expenses.

Toutell v. Douglas and Others (Trustees of the York City and District Provident and Industrial Society), June 1864.

THIS case raised a dry but rather important practical point with reference to Provident Societies, and revealed an unfortunate blunder in an Act of last Session, in taking away the capacity of trustees of such societies to sue or to be sued. Various Acts of Parliament had conferred this capacity upon Provident Societies and upon Friendly Societies. The latest of those Acts was passed so recently as 1862. Last Session, however, a new Act passed, which by some mistake, while it repealed the previous Acts and gave an optional power of registration, did not contain a clause continuing this capacity to Provident Societies in the case of non-registration. The consequence, it was contended, was that they are left exactly as they would be at common-law—that is, that they have no such capacity of suing or being sued by the names of trustees, but can only sue or be sued in the names of all the members. The plaintiff, however, in the present action sued for goods supplied to the Society before the new Act.

Mr. Kemplay argued for the defendants, and relied upon the new Act.

Mr. M. Mellish, Q. C. (with him Mr. Patchett), argued for the plaintiff, that he could not sue the individual members, because he did not supply the goods on their credit, for at the time of the supply they were incorporated under the then existing Acts. Then the new Act gave the societies power to incorporate themselves by registration. The Legislature did not appear to have contemplated that a society might not desire to be registered because it did not desire to pay their debts. (Laughter.) Thus, therefore, on the construction contended for by the other side, the company could not be sued at all so long as they did not choose to register. The learned counsel urged that the old Act must be deemed to be kept alive as to old debts and contracts. Could it be conceived that the Legislature intended to take away the creditor's remedy?

The Lord Chief Justice.—No doubt they did not intend it, for they simply did not think of it. It is a manifest blunder.

Mr. Justice Wightman.—It is obvious that the Legislature took it for granted that all the societies would register.

The Court held that there was no law under which such a society not registered could be sued in the name of its trustees. There must be judgment, therefore, against the plaintiff.

Report.

Before Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood, July 1864.

Re the Chatham Co-operative Industrial Society.

THE Vice-Chancellor gave judgment in this case, which cam before the Court on a motion to stay all proceedings under the orde for winding-up the society made by this Court in November 186 and that the official liquidator might be directed to return certai moneys paid to him under the winding-up proceedings.

The society, which was formed in 1858, had been originally regi tered under the "Industrial Societies Act, 1852," and in May last, lon after the date of the winding-up order, was registered under th "Industrial Societies' Act, 1862," which repeals the former Act an limits the liability of members, directing that the winding-up societies registered under the Act shall take place in the count court of the district.

The arguments turned upon the jurisdiction of the Court to mak an order for winding-up a society of this nature.

Mr. Daniel, Q. C., and Mr. Thomas Hughes appeared in suppo of the motion; Mr. Giffard, Q. C., Mr. W. G. Harrison (Commo Law Bar) and Mr. A. E. Miller, on behalf of the official liquidato opposed the motion.

The Vice-Chancellor said, that the question had been determine by the Lord Chancellor in the unreported case (with which he ha been kindly furnished by Mr. Roxburgh) of the Sheffield an Hallamshire Industrial Society, where it was held that the Court Chancery had no jurisdiction to wind-up one of these industri societies. But, independently of that authority, he was clearly opinion that the case did not come within the Companies, Act 1862 (25 and 26 Vict. c. 89), as the Legislature had in the sam Session passed an Act (25 and 26 Vict. c. 87) which regulate these societies, and formed a distinct code for them, limiting the liability, and providing that they should be wound-up at as small a expense as possible. The society in question, having been registere underthe "Industrial Act, 1862," would not be subject to the provisio of the Companies' Act of that Session, and the result was that th winding-up order of the 22d November 1862 must be discharge Looking, however, at all that had taken place, it was not a case f costs, and he had no jurisdiction to order a return of the money tha had been paid to the official liquidator.

The Registrar receives almost daily complaints, by and o behalf of the members of Friendly Societies, respecting th compulsory payments for beer and for anniversary expense Considerable difficulty appears to exist in obtaining the pay ments due for sickness, or on the death of a member or mem ber's wife, where the parties have joined Friendly Societi throug rough the means of agents; complaints are also made as to ne misapplication of the funds, and the manner in which ocieties are dissolved: and in order to make further provisions or settling disputes, preventing misapplication of funds, the rnishing yearly statements, and to enable, if possible, the ndustrious classes to insure with safety against sickness, and or a payment at death of sums under 20 l., it is suggested hat a Committee should be appointed in the next Session, o take these matters into consideration.

In the APPENDIX will be found the amount of the funds, nd the number of members, extracted from the Returns re-eived by the Registrar.

The following Abstract of the Returns received from Friendly Societies previous to th 1st of June 1864 will afford some useful information with respect to the number of mem bers and the pecuniary position of these Societies. The "amount of funds" is that state in the Return; but this stated amount, in some instances, doubtless includes bad debts an doubtful investments, which will never be recovered; in by far the great majority c cases, there is no doubt that the sum stated is actually at the disposition of the respectiv Societies. The "number of members" also may, in some few instances, include honorar members; but the instances are so rare that it may be taken for granted that the "numbe of members" means the number of effective members only.
